Description: This one-story side gable clipped-roof Colonial Revival bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the southern side of the street façade supported on tapered square columns. All roofs have gable-end returns. The entry stairs originally stepped directly down to the east, but now lead down to the north. The entry doorway is flanked by original wood-sash sidelights and with additional pairs of original wood-sash double-hung windows on either side. All windows lack their original casing. The northern side of the street façade has a wood-sash tripartite set of doors which once accessed a now removed deck, and a pair of wood-sash windows at the northern house edge. The house is presently sheathed with horizontal aluminum siding.

Cultural Data: Col. Campbell C. McCullough (1886-1973) was assistant corporation counsel for the City of Seattle. He served more than 31 years as an Army Reserve officer. His son, Campbell B. McCullough, had a robust career as a Captain in the Air Force. He flew more than 25 missions as a B-52 bomber pilot stationed in Italy, and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross in 1945.
