Description: This one-story intersecting gables Colonial Revival bungalow has a "H" shaped plan, with two side gable roofs joined by a central front gable roof. The house has a central projecting gabled porch roof originally supported on a pair of Tuscan columns, which have been replaced at some time by a pair of wrought-iron supports. The central doorway is flanked by a pair of non-original tripartite windows. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and all roofs have eave returns.

Cultural Data: John Edward Morgan (1882-1948) was a first aid instructor.
