Description: This two-story front gambrel Dutch Colonial Revival house has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the northern side of the house that is supported by two square (originally two pairs of three) wood-cased columns. The main floor originally had a tripartite wood-sash window that has been replaced by a non-original picture window. The gambrel end has a pair wood-sash double hung windows. The main roof has shed dormers on each side. The attic has a small vertical vent. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and all roofs have eave returns.

Cultural Data: Philip Van Groshong (1886-1942) was a wood cutter and fuel supplier in 1930.
