Description: This one-story Colonial Revival house has a full-width brick masonry entry porch that is partially sheltered by a central low pitched arched roof supported on a pair of original Tuscan columns. The central entry doorway is flanked on both sides by groups of three 15-light French doors. The entry stairway retains its original brick masonry stair cheeks. The two original eyebrow dormers on the main roof were removed at some time in the past. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and all roofs have eave returns.

Cultural Data: The Scott family was a longtime fixture in Ravenna. James D., a certified public accountant (born in Canada ca. 1897), and his wife Helen raised their two children, James M. and Helen E., in the house they occupied for over 40 years. James M. was awarded the Faculty Medal for 1946 as a junior at the University of Washington; this medal is the highest award given for academic achievement. Helen L. Scott, who was a civic leader in numerous ladies' organizations, died in 1965 and James D. remarried. He died in 1982.
